

2025 AHSS International Summer School

Programme Topic: Irish Studies

Academic Lead: Peter
Gray

Dates: 23 June – 3 July 2025

Topic Summary:

The 2-week Irish Studies programme takes a deeper dive into understanding identities in Ireland and their relationship with the wider world, through explorations of the country's history, culture and language, with particular reference to the acute divisions over identity in the north.

The first week looks at historical topics including:

- the origins and structural legacies of colonialism and religious change in shaping Ulster's conflicting 'ethno-religious' communities
- how the relationships between these communities have changed, sometimes in surprising ways, over time
- the wider contexts of Irish economic development, famine, gender relations, mass emigration and the rise of an overseas diaspora, alongside the political ideologies of nationalism and unionism
- the causes and consequences of the partition of Ireland through to the experience of the Northern Irish 'Troubles' of 1968-98 and their aftermaths
- how the 'difficult' past of Ireland is remembered and represented today, including in the Ulster Museum
- a visit to the Ulster-American Folk Park will focus on how migration and diaspora has and continues to mould Irish society and identity

In week two we will focus on the cultural expressions of Irish identity, looking at

- the decline and revival of the Irish language, with a visit to the Culturlann language centre
- the contribution to Irish culture and identities of some of the country's leading writers from the 18th century to the present
- how Troubles-era and contemporary Northern Ireland has been represented on screen, in poetry and in novels
- the week includes a field trip to Nobel Prize-winning poet Seamus Heaney's 'Homeplace' at Bellaghy and a plantation 'big house' in the Ulster countryside.

Intended Learning Outcomes

- develop a more rounded understanding of the culture and history of the north of Ireland, and its relations with the rest of the island and overseas
- identify and analyse primary and secondary sources and literary texts relating to Ireland as appropriate
- undertake independent library-based research as appropriate
